The matzevah (memorial stone) pictured on the cover is that of Philip Lowenstern. The stone was one of the first erected in Urbana in the first Jewish cemetery established in the Champaign-Urbana community. It was moved to Mount Hope cemetery around 1899 when all of the burials were transferred and the original Jewish cemetery was closed.

According to his obituary, Philip Lowenstern was born on October 20, 1804 in Germany. He raised his family there in a small town near Göttingen, where his wife died. Philip was living with his son, Morris, in Urbana when he died on June 13, 1871. The pitcher near the top of the matzevah indicates that Philip was a Levite.

Philip's daughter Bette and son Morris are also buried in Mount Hope.

Introduction

Collection of the information in this report was begun in 1994 by Allen and Elaine Avner who were participating as volunteers in an international effort to index all Jewish burials. This project is currently known as the JewishGen Online Worldwide Burial Registry (JOWBR) and supports a "...database of names and other identifying information from Jewish cemeteries and burial records worldwide..." The information on burials reported here thus appears in the JOWBR Cemetery Database (<http://www.jewishgen.org/databases/cemetery/>), which also includes pictures of all existing monuments. The first edition of this report was produced for the 1994/1995 Sinai Temple Cemetery Committee. This fourth edition is based on the original with updates on history, monuments and burials done by Allen Avner, plus invaluable information kindly shared by the late T.M. Whiteside from his own research on early Champaign County funeral home, cemetery, and death records. The first edition of this report was the work of Allen Avner (monument transcriptions, data verification, historic research, data entry, editor), Elaine Avner (monument transcriptions, data verification, graphic design), and Tauby Shimkin, then chair of the Cemetery Committee, (monument transcriptions and data verification). We thank the relatives of those in the cemetery and the staffs of Mittendorf-Calvert Funeral Homes, Morgan Memorial Homes, Mount Hope Cemetery, Renner Wikoff Chapel, and Sinai Temple for their kind and patient aid. The aid of the staff and resources of the Champaign County Historical Archives at the Urbana Free Library, the University of Illinois Newspaper Library, and the Illinois Historical Survey at the University of Illinois Library is also gratefully acknowledged. Special thanks are owed to Ruth Berkson, Edythe Davis, Audrey Ann & Arnold Leavitt, Norma & Arthur Lewis, Esther Steinberg, Stanford Sholem, Jack Simon, Eugene Stern, and Ruth Youngerman for their help in identifying relationships among early families in the community and in suggesting added resources.

A Brief History of Jewish Cemeteries in Champaign County Illinois

In Champaign County, Illinois, as in many new American Jewish communities in the 19th century, the first Jewish organization was a burial society (Chevra Kadisha) rather than a congregation. The original minutes of that first Jewish organization in Champaign County survive as part of the American Jewish Archives at the Cincinnati campus of Hebrew Union College.

The minutes, written by Solomon Bernstein, report that on 6 October 1867 "...a number of the Israelites of Champaign and Urbana..." met at the Champaign home of Max Eichberg and "...resolved to form an association under the name of Ahavat Achim or 'Brotherly Love'...". The threefold object of Ahavat Achim was "first: to assist one another in cases of sickness; secondly: to acquire a piece of land for a burial ground, and to contribute equally for the payment of the purchase money and cost of fencing the same, and thirdly: to cooperate in cases of death in performing the Mosaic Ritual."

The list of names subscribing to this resolution includes the heads of many of the pioneer Jewish families of the community: Herman Bacharach, Solomon Bernstein, Isaac Bing, Jonas Bing, Max Eichberg, Max M. Eppstein, R. M. Eppstein, Samuel Eppstein, Henry Hahn, L. Hart, S. Hart, M. Jericho, Joseph Kuhn, Morris Lowenstern, Daniel Schwarz, Henry Schwarz, Leopold Schwarz, Abraham Stern, and Nathan Stern.

By the third meeting of the group in early December, 1867, a committee had produced a constitution and bylaws for Ahavat Achim. Officers elected for one-year terms at that December meeting were Max Eichberg, President; L. Hart, Vice President; S. Bernstein, Secretary; M. Lowenstern, Treasurer; and Joseph Kuhn, Representative. The constitution indicated some minor changes in the goals of the organization:

- (a) To assist each other in cases of sickness or death.
- (b) To buy an appropriate lot of ground for a burial place.
- (c) To erect, in the course of time, when it shall be decided necessary, a dead house on the said burial ground.

Membership was open to "Any Israelite...twenty one years of age & of good moral standing..." who paid an initiation fee of five dollars and dues of one dollar per month. Members were subject to being expelled for conviction "...of a criminal offence, or not observing the covenant of Abraham..." Non-member "Israelites" were to have the right to bury a member of their family in the Ahavat Achim cemetery on payment of the cost of digging the grave plus not less than ten dollars nor more than forty dollars.

The Ahavat Achim minutes at the 26 July 1868 meeting reported success in buying "not quite an acre" of land from Saul Waters, "located in Waters grove about a mile north of Urbana" for $200. This first Jewish cemetery in Champaign County was located at what is now the southeast corner of Cunningham Avenue and Perkins Road in Urbana. Across the road was the country mansion of Judge J. O. Cunningham, now the site of the Cunningham Children's Home.

On 4 November 1869 the bylaws were amended to reduce monthly membership dues from one dollar to 50 cents and at the 25 September 1870 meeting a motion was passed approving the payment of $187.75 for construction of a fence around the new cemetery.

The First Burial

One of the deficiencies of organizational minutes as a source of history is that they sometimes only hint at what must have been significant events for the organization. The first burial in the new cemetery in August 1870 is reported in the September 1870 minutes only in the form of a motion "to send a bill (for $10) to Mr Kahn for the burial of his child...". From her monument we know that Hattie Kahn died on 1 August 1870 at the age of 1 month and 25 days and was the daughter of Nathan and Hanna Kahn. A search of the 1870 census was necessary to discover that the Kahn family was from Mattoon. Hattie was days away from her death when her name was captured in the 1870 census for Mattoon on 29 July 1870. The census shows Nathan Kahn as a 31 year old merchant and both Nathan and Hanna as being born in the principality of Baden in what is now Germany.

Burial of Hattie in Champaign rather than Mattoon is an indication of the influence of the railroad on the territory covered by a 19th century rural mid-west Jewish community. With the coming of the railroad to Champaign - Urbana in 1855, it became possible for residents of nearby towns to travel to Champaign by train in about the same amount of time required to travel by horse and carriage across town. Hence we find the names of residents of towns with small Jewish populations, such as Farmer City, Mattoon, and Paxton included as active members of many early Champaign - Urbana Jewish organizations.

Demographic and Cultural Factors

Examination of the 1870 Federal census for Champaign County reveals that the majority of the founders of Ahavat Achim were unmarried. Further, the Champaign - Urbana community contained no identifiable unmarried Jewish adult females. In a newly developing community where social services were meager, and in the absence of family, an organization like Ahavat Achim was probably seen as the only source of compassionate support for these men in case of sickness or death. Fraternal organizations served a similar purpose, so it is not surprising that the organizers of Ahavat Achim were also instrumental in later organizing a local lodge of the international B'nai B'rith in April 1877.

By the time of the 1880 census we can see a substantial change in the makeup of the Champaign - Urbana Jewish community. Though there were still unmarried males in the community, the majority of members of Ahavat Achim had married and had begun families.

Tragically, these early families faced an infant mortality rate that was far above that seen today. Of the first 40 persons buried in Jewish cemeteries in Champaign County, 14 were under the age of 13. Those who survived into adulthood fared somewhat better, but their mortality rates were still sobering by the standards of today. The average age at death for the first 40 burials in the Jewish Cemetery (1870 to 1915) was 36.7 years. The median age (the age at which equal numbers were older or younger) was 41. The average age at death for the most recent 40 burials in the Jewish Cemetery (1999 to early 2004) was 79.1 years, with a median age of 87. The oldest person in the early group was 87, the same age as the median (midpoint) age of the more recent group.

The First Change in Management

In March of 1887 membership of Ahavat Achim merged with the membership of Grand Prairie Lodge 281 of B'nai B'rith, and management of the Jewish Cemetery was taken over by B'nai B'rith. B'nai B'rith was aided by fund raising and maintenance efforts of the Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Society (from 1889 to about 1891) and the Jewish Ladies Social Circle (founded in 1894).

The Cemetery Moves and the Community Grows

In November 1898 the B'nai B'rith lodge proposed moving the Jewish Cemetery from its original location to a section within Mount Hope Cemetery in Champaign. Records of B'nai B'rith and the women's organizations do not give a reason for this move, though possibly it was related to the conversion in 1895 of the home of Judge J. O. Cunningham into an orphanage – the present-day Cunningham Children's Home. On 14 March 1899, 21 8-plot lots were purchased by the B'nai B'rith lodge from Mount Hope for $300. Mount Hope Cemetery records indicate that 15 of the burials in this new section were re-burials from the old cemetery in Urbana. After all were moved to Mount Hope, the old cemetery was closed. Since that time, the majority of Jewish burials in Champaign County have been in Mount Hope.

As the size and diversity of the Jewish community grew, the special Jewish sections of Mount Hope also grew and diversified. As new Jewish organizations became established within the community, operation of the Jewish cemetery became more of a cooperative activity. The major populations served have belonged to the Reform congregation of Sinai Temple (established in 1904 as the "Champaign-Urbana Hebrew Congregation"), the Orthodox Congregation B'nai Israel (active from 1912 through 1954), and the University of Illinois Hillel Foundation (established in 1923).

From 1899 to the present, the area covered by the Jewish section of Mount Hope has been gradually expanded by purchase of additional land with the income earned from sales of burial rights. In June 2004, the Jewish section of Mount Hope Cemetery consisted of 786 burial spaces containing 346 interments. Purchase of an added 96 spaces was in progress.

Burial and Ritual Practices

The bylaws of Ahavat Achim specified procedures for burial that depart in some ways from current perceptions of appropriate Jewish practices. For example, the bylaws specified that, except in special circumstances, no burial was to take place before the expiration of 48 hours after death. Current Jewish practice is that burial should ideally be performed within 24 hours of death.

The Ahavat Achim bylaws stated that all members were obligated to attend the funeral of a member or his wife. In the case of the death of a child, it was the duty of at least ten members to attend. Shiva services at the home of the mourners followed the German Reform practice of beginning on the day of burial and continuing for three days. All members were expected to attend these prayer services.

Mention of building a "dead house" at the cemetery suggests that the group planned to follow traditional Ashkenazic Jewish methods of preparation of the dead near the place of burial. Such a building was added to the first cemetery in the summer of 1871 (at a cost of $128). Unfortunately, we have no record of what practices were actually followed by members of the society.

The late 19th century was a time when funeral and burial practices in all smaller American communities were undergoing change. Early 19th century Jewish burial practices were very similar to those used by the general population in rural America. The body was minimally prepared (usually in the home) by members of the family and buried almost immediately with a brief grave-side religious service. Simple coffins were built at the time of need by local carpenters or cabinet makers.

These practices began to change during the American Civil War when techniques of embalming and use of mass produced caskets became more widespread. Factory made caskets were first added as a sideline to furniture stores. Later some of these stores added embalming services to their coffin sideline and began the profession of "Funeral Undertaking". By the late 19th century the preparation of the dead for burial by family and friends was decreasing even in smaller rural communities and what had begun as a sideline for furniture stores had emerged for some as a prime source of business. We read in The Standard Atlas of Champaign County, Illinois (George Ogle, Chicago, 1913) an advertisement for "Mittendorf & Kiler, Undertakers" (the present day Mittendorf - Calvert Funeral Homes) which lists "Furniture, Carpets, Pictures and Frames" as wares also available.

By 1887 the influence of the original members of Ahavat Achim on funeral practices may have waned. The March 1887 merger of the organization with Grand Prairie Lodge 281 of B'nai B'rith certainly changed the focus of management of the cemetery. In addition, Max Eichberg, the founding president of Ahavat Achim and probably one of the major forces behind its activities, was about to leave the community.

On 27 July 1890, the burial of Julius Bernstein, son of Solomon and Fanny, was handled by the undertaker Asbury Shuck. This burial was the first Jewish burial known to be handled by a commercial funeral director. Like the Mittendorf family business, Asbury Shuck began as a furniture dealer in Urbana some time after 1870, expanded into funeral undertaking, and finally became a full time funeral director in a building at the corner of Race and Green streets in Urbana. In May 1909 the Shuck Funeral Home was sold to Enos Renner, a partner of Renner Brothers Livery and Stable business and a major supplier of rental horse-drawn hearses to the community. The business begun by Asbury Shuck and continued by Enos Renner exists today as Renner-Wicoff Chapel.

Examination of newspaper obituaries and the records of funeral directors indicate that a substantial number of Jewish funerals and burials in the early 20th century conformed more to the fashions of the time than to Jewish tradition. Elaborate coffins and burial vaults became more common and there is little evidence that ritual preparation of the dead was being done on a regular basis until the revival of a local Chevra Kadisha.

In the late 20th century the Champaign - Urbana Jewish community continued to explore the options provided by modern funeral practice. The Jewish cemetery contains many burials of cremated remains. Cremation is a practice permitted, with reluctance, by the Reform movement. Another innovation is the provision of space set aside in a mausoleum for entombment of those who choose that form of interment. One of the responsa (rabbinic judgments) found on pages 163 - 164 in Walter Jacob's book Contemporary American Reform Responsa (Central Conference of American Rabbis, New York: 1987) is in response to a question raised by Sinai Temple's Rabbi Isaac Neuman on the propriety of use of a mausoleum for interments. The judgment, dated December 1981, was that "There is nothing in Reform Judaism which would preclude burial in a mausoleum." Though this option remains open, only eleven members of the Jewish community have chosen to use it.

In the early 1990s, a study group led by Lynn and Ira Wachtel under sponsorship of the Champaign - Urbana Hadassah chapter led to organization of a new Chevra Kadisha that is now a part of the Champaign - Urbana Jewish Federation. In addition to organizing the new Chevra Kadisha, the study group made a major contribution to the community in the form of a guidebook (Lynn Wachtel & Alice Berkson, A Guide to Death and Mourning Traditions, Champaign - Urbana Jewish Federation, Champaign, IL, 1993 and 2000).

With establishment of the new Chevra Kadisha, Jewish funerals began a noticeable move back toward the ideals of simplicity in burial practice, even in cases where the services of the Chevra Kadisha itself were not used. Funeral homes in the community also became better acquainted with the range of Jewish funeral practices as a result of cooperative interaction with the Chevra Kadisha. Funeral directors provided working space for members of the Chevra Kadisha to perform Tahara (ritual washing and dressing of the body) and opened their buildings to the Shomrim (guardians) who watch over the deceased from the time of death to the time of burial.

The Champaign - Urbana Jewish Cemetery Today

Historically, the Champaign - Urbana Jewish Cemetery has been a community resource, created before any currently existing Jewish organization and maintained through the years by members of virtually every Jewish organization in the community. The Jewish sections of Mount Hope are currently managed by a committee appointed by the Board of Trustees of Sinai Temple and Sinai Temple is now the legal owner of the cemetery land. However, it holds this land in stewardship for the entire Jewish community.

With the exception of the donations of the founding members of Ahavat Achim and the groups that maintained it prior to implementation of endowed land care by the management of Mount Hope Cemetery, the cemetery has always been self-supporting. Income from sale of burial rights has been used solely to buy added space. The price of burial rights has been set at the minimum required to buy replacement land and provide free space for indigent burials. Since Sinai Temple first took over stewardship of the cemetery, its bylaws have dictated that the cemetery funds be segregated from other Temple funds and accounted for separately.

Dedication. This report is dedicated to the memory of all of those buried or entombed in the Jewish sections of Mount Hope Cemetery. To aid identification, names of parents, spouses, and (where space was available) children appear in the main listing of names. Usually the individual matzevah (grave monument) was a primary source of information. Monument locations and inscriptions were carefully compared with Sinai Temple and Mount Hope Cemetery records (a task hindered by the loss of most cemetery records in a fire at Sinai Temple in January 1971). Relatives and friends were then approached for added information on names, dates, and family relationships. Finally, use was made of newspaper obituaries, local histories, biographies, the Sinai Temple Yahrzeit list, the Sinai Temple Memorial Plaques, records of local funeral directors, the Social Security Death Master Index and Champaign County Death Records. All of these sources are, of course, fallible, and we frequently found conflicts between them. If you find errors or know of additional sources of information, please let us know so the next edition of this report can be made more helpful.

Jewish Sections in Mount Hope

Mount Hope Cemetery is located at 611 East Pennsylvania Avenue in the city of Champaign. The cemetery straddles the boundary between the cities of Urbana and Champaign, though all Jewish sections are in the Champaign portion. Mount Hope is at the South end of the University of Illinois Campus, bounded on the North by Pennsylvania Avenue and on the South by Florida Avenue. The diagram on page 7 shows locations of the Jewish sections in Mount Hope.

The East half of Block 24, the “Hebrew Congregation” block, is the oldest Jewish section. It is located near the North edge of Mount Hope, just West of the GAR section. The Jewish section of Block 24 was expanded from the original 21 lots to 33 lots containing 8 plots each, for a total of 264 plots. An addition to the West edge of Block 24 providing an additional 36 4-plot lots, for a total of 144 plots was begun in 1995 and consecrated in the Fall of 2000. Work on another extension to the south of the West extension that will add another 96 plots was begun in 2004

Block 25, located immediately to the East of Block 24 and just inside the Pennsylvania Avenue entrance to Mount Hope, was opened in the 1950s. Block 25 has 378 plots grouped in lots of 3 or 6 plots each.

In the 1970s, the Sanctuary of Shalom, the Jewish section of the Mausoleum with 36 vaults was opened.

By May 2006, the Jewish sections held a total of 353 burials and 11 entombments.

Plot Location Codes. Mount Hope locations are represented by a 3-part code. The first element of the code is the Block number (24 or 25, or the letter M if in the Mausoleum). The second element of the code is the Lot number (or, in the Mausoleum, the level number). The third element of the code is the Plot number (or, in the Mausoleum, the horizontal range number). Thus, the code 25-TT-3 represents Plot 3 in Lot TT of Block 25, and the code M-3-A represents the vault at the A (left-most) end of the third level (from the Mausoleum floor).

Locating an Individual. For precise location of an individual, use the alphabetized list of burials and entombments at the end of this report. That list contains the full name of each person, selected personal information, and a plot location code. Use the plot location code and the detailed maps beginning on page 4 to find the desired block, lot, and plot. Where space on these detailed maps allows, the name, year of birth, and year of death is shown for each person. Note the key on each map for interpretation of special symbols.

Unmarked Burials. Following some traditions, burial of a nefel (an infant who did not live at least 30 days), is not marked by a monument. Also, the dominant North American Jewish custom is to wait until a year after death before marking a burial with a monument. Both temporarily and permanently unmarked burials are indicated on the maps by names enclosed in dashes. For example, the unmarked 1919 burial of the 3-year-old son of Moses and Nettie Selicovitz who died in the influenza epidemic of the winter of 1918-1919 is shown as:

-LOUIS SELICOVITZ 1916-1919-

Multiple Burials. Plots that contain multiple burials, usually involving infants, are indicated on maps by names enclosed by inequality symbols < like this> . For example, the plot that contains the marked 1935 burial of Rose Hostetler (infant daughter of Walter and Lena Selicovitz Hostetler) is shared with the unmarked 1916 burial of Elvira Irving. This combination of shared and marked/unmarked burials is shown on the detailed map as:

< R HOSTETLER / - E IRVING->

Because of space limitations on the maps, the above entry abbreviates the names and shows no dates. Full names and dates (where known) can be found listed in alphabetic order by surname on the pages that follow the maps.

Lot and Plot Spacing and Size. For clarity on the detailed maps, lots are shown as boxes containing the individual burial plots. These boxes are separated on the detailed maps by surrounding space to allow labeling of lots. With rare exceptions, adjacent lots in the cemetery are not actually separated by any space. Individual burial plots are 40 x 120 inches in Block 24 and Block 24 Extensions, and 48 x 120 inches in Block 25.

CHAMPAIGN IL MOUNT HOPE CEMETERY WEST HALF OF BLOCK 25

Alphabetic Listing by Surname

The following list summarizes major details known about each person buried or entombed in the Jewish sections of Mount Hope Cemetery. Included are full names; dates of birth and death; plot number; significant information from the monument (in quotation marks); names of close relatives; and other available details as space permits.

Plot Location Codes. Locations within Mount Hope are represented by a 3-part code in the Plot column. The first element of the code is the Block number (24 or 25, or, if in the Mausoleum, the letter M). The second element of the code is the Lot number (or, if in the Mausoleum, the level number). The third element is the Plot number (or, if in the Mausoleum, the horizontal range number). Plot locations can be found on the earlier detailed maps.

Notes and Comments. The Notes column gives added information or identifies major sources of information found for the person beyond that in Mount Hope records or on the monument. Codes used in the Notes column are:

Code	Indicates
C	Biographical information from J. O. Cunningham's 1905 History (see below for full citation)
D	Champaign County Death Records used to determine or verify information
H	Monument contains a Hebrew or Yiddish inscription with added information
O	Information taken from obituary in the Champaign Daily News , the Champaign-Urbana Courier , or the Champaign-Urbana News-Gazette
P	Information on name or date of death verified from memorial plaque at Sinai Temple
R	Biographical information from Asa Rubenstein's 1982 History (see below for full citation)
S	Social Security Death Records used to determine or verify dates of birth and death
V	Veteran. Served in the armed forces during a war
x	Grave was unmarked at time of this report. The burial may have been less than a year old, or may have been for an infant who died before it was a month old.
m	The individual was disinterred after burial and moved to another city.

The second line of each entry is a Comment Line. On this line, the following abbreviations have been used:

- B. = Born in (town or country)
- Bd = Buried (date of burial)
- D. = Died in (town or country)
- DO = Daughter Of
- FO = Father Of
- HO = Husband Of
- Md = Married (date and/or place of marriage)
- MO = Mother Of
- SO = Son Of
- WO = Wife Of

Jewish War Veterans Buried at Mount Hope

Research by the National Museum of American Jewish Military History indicates that Jewish men and women have served in every war in which the United States was involved, including the Revolutionary War, in numbers greater than would have been expected from their representation in the general population. The following list includes those buried at Mount Hope who have been identified as serving in the armed forces of the United States or its allies during a war. Arm of service and branch are shown where known.
